MRS. C. A. BUTTERFIELD, ILLINOIS LADY, DEAD; REMAINS GO NORTH

At the apartments she occupied as a winter home, at Daytona Beach, Mrs. Caroline A. Butterfield, aged 67 years, passed away at half-past six o'clock, Monday evening. She had been in poor health for a long time, and lately her condition was so serious that her physician and relatives abandoned hope that she would recover. Leakage of the heart is said to have been the cause of death.

Accompanied by a brother, Frank C. Randall, Mrs. Randall and their daughter, Miss Ruth Randall, the remains will leave this afternoon at 3:45 for Joliet, Ill., the home of Mrs. Butterfield. Funeral services will be held directly after the party arrives at Joliet, and interment is to be made in Oakwood cemetery, that city, April 22nd.

Mrs. Butterfield was a widow. Being in bad health she came to Florida about two months ago, hoping to be benefited by the sea air and mild climate. She had no children.

Among the surviving relatives are three brothers: F. C. Randall, of this city and Benton Harbor, Mich.; W. C. Randall, of Los Angeles, Cal.; A. S. Randall, of Daytona Beach; a sister, Mrs. Belle R. Case, of Joliet; and mother, Mrs. M. D. Randall, of Joliet.

THE GREAT CONFLICT

THE ALLIES VIEW

By Albert W. Bryce.

It seems inconsistent with the characteristic sincerity of the German mind for Prof. Munsterberg, Mr. Rider and others to argue that the destruction of non-combatants' lives by the sinking of the Falaba and other passenger vessels is justifiable in retaliation for the attempt of Great Britain to starve Germany out.

All who have read history know that every nation that is at war seeks, and always has sought, by blockades, by cordons, by the interruption of commerce and by every warlike means possible, to starve its opponent out. So far as is known there has never been any exception to this rule. Want and hunger have been from time immemorial a legitimate weapon of warfare, provided they are inflicted or imposed by legitimate, warlike means; and it is even an admitted principle that hunger and want may be regarded as humane in comparison with the cannon, the rifle and the bayonet, since they hasten the end of war, and avert death by missiles and other violent forms of destruction, while of course they can be averted at any time by submission.

The Chicago and Alton railroad has started but an instruction card for the benefit of the ticket agents to make sure they understand the tariffs, routing, accounting, etc.

THE GERMAN VIEW

By Hugo von Kleist.

After a lull of several months another flood of German atrocity stories is inundating the United States. This time the campaign of lies and manufactured evidence emanates from France and is being propagated by English and American agents in an even more insidious manner than the famous campaign of the Belgian Commission issued its famous pamphlet, charges were analyzed and showed that they were made up of ex parte statements unsubstantiated by facts and not even sworn to in a majority of instances.

The latest is a pamphlet of unspeakable filth, entitled "German Atrocities in France," purporting to be a translation of "the official report of the French commission, published by authority." This pamphlet is so vile and utterly debased in its tone that it offends not only against probability and good taste, but clearly against the United States postal laws prohibiting the sending of obscene matter through the mails. We therefore call the attention of the United States post-office department to the violation of the law, and ask for a rigid investigation.

The Pittsburg and Lake Erie railroad will build a yard extension at New Castle.

THE BLIND MAN

By JOHN CAMPBELL

(Copyright, 1924, by W. J. Campbell.)
Dorothy Lee, a beautiful girl, and it was agreed that it was a great pity she was so homely.

"It isn't a fair handicap," said old Mrs. Howell, who kept the post office. "It's hard enough for a girl to get married in New England, anyway, but with her looks—I say it isn't fair."

Dorothy's father probably indulged this view, but the hard-headed old farmer was too practical a man to worry about his daughter's looks. Dorothy lived alone with him, her mother being dead. What she thought of the subject she never disclosed. She must have known, however, that there was a reason why she was always a wall-flower at parties and was never invited on picnics and such festivities.

When she was twenty-five Tom Lanark came home after an absence of six years in the West.

Public stories preceded him. He had found a gold mine in Nevada, one of the richest in the world, it was said, and the glare of the sun on the alkali plains had scarred his eyeballs until he could only distinguish light from darkness. So he had come back at thirty, to resume life—no, not to resume it, but to take up its burden alone in the old home that had given him birth.

Margaret Barnett had been an old flame of Tom's in the bygone days. But if there was any idea that she would link her life to a blind man's Margaret, who was "running" with the banker's son, dismissed it promptly.

"I want a live one when I get married," she said. And Dorothy witnessed a snubbing which Margaret administered to Tom in the street, in front of her house.

She saw the blind man trying to peer after the girl whose shrill, scornful laughter echoed through the quiet street, and an excess of pity overcame her, shrinking, and she hurried out.

"Mr. Lanark," she said quickly, conscious that her words were almost beyond her control, "I am Dorothy Lee. Don't you remember me?"

Tom Lanark felt for her hands and took them in his. "Indeed I do," he answered warmly. "I have often thought of you since I have been away."

"I think it was a shame the way Margaret Barnett spoke to you," declared Dorothy indignantly.

"Ah, well, one lives and finds out these things," replied the blind man wearily.

After that Tom fell into the habit of dropping into the old farmer's place of an afternoon, and on one occasion he actually drove up in a buggy.

"I thought I'd ask you to come for a drive with me, Miss Dorothy," he explained. "I was sure I knew the way down the street to here, and that you'd do the rest—if you are willing to do an act of kindness for a blind man."

"O, I should love to go driving with you," the girl answered. She ran upstairs to change her frock, and, five minutes later, the village was speculating over the appearance of Dorothy and Tom, driving down the road into the country and chatting as merrily as though they were old friends—which, indeed, they might have been called.

But during the return Dorothy became very pensive. For she knew that her heart had turned very strongly in the direction of the blind man, and that he, too, as her woman's instinct told her, was by no means indifferent to her.

And when they neared the town he suddenly placed his arm around her and drew her toward him.

"Do you think you can ever learn to care for a blind man, Dorothy?" he asked.

It was a tremulous figure, shrinking and nerved only by intense resolution, that went to Tom's door that night, fearful of discovery by the prying eyes of the town, yet spurred on by the sense of tremendous necessity. And, after she had knocked, she could hardly make her knees support her, and clung to the door-jamb for support.

The door opened. Tom peered out. "I can't marry you," the girl was sobbing wildly. "You have never seen me as I am, Tom. You don't know—"

"Don't know what, dear?" asked Tom's quiet voice. She felt his hands on her shoulders, but she could not see him through the gathering tears.

"I am the homeliest girl in Erpingham," cried Dorothy. "If ever you saw me you would be ashamed of me, Tom. And I can't marry you and not let you know; and I can't marry you and let you be ashamed of me."

She was beyond all self-control. She was weeping in his arms. She heard Tom's voice between his kisses.

"Dorothy, you are the prettiest girl in Erpingham, and it wouldn't make any difference to me anyway," he said. "Because I love you. Now I will tell you something, dear. I am not quite so blind as people think—in fact the doctor says that in a few months more I may see as well as ever. Sometimes a man may pretend to be blind, Dorothy, in order to know his real friends from his false ones."

"How pretty Dorothy Lee has grown since her engagement to Tom Lanark," said the gossip later.

And all agreed that she made the most beautiful bride that ever came out of Erpingham—all but Margaret Barnett, who was no longer "running" with the banker's son.

All who have heard him will want to hear him again, and those who have not heard him will miss a rare treat through failure to hear him.

On Thursday evening at the Christian church, Prof. Richmond will give his experiences in Sunday school work in Cuba, and will also show views illustrative of the island and his work there. No admission will be charged to the Thursday evening meeting but a free-will offering will be received.

All are cordially invited to attend these two meetings, and enjoy an evening or two with Prof. Richmond.

OSSIPEE, NEW COAST GUARD VESSEL, LAUNCHED TODAY

NEWPORT NEWS, VA., April 20.—The new coast guard ship, Ossipee, was launched today and was christened by Miss Sallie McAdoo, daughter of Secretary McAdoo. The ship will succeed the famous revenue cutter, Woodbury, which has patrolled the coast of Maine, N. H. and New England waters since from the time when memory of man runneth not to the contrary. The new boat is a model in design and efficiency. She is built to carry coal for long voyages, to crush heavy ice, and carry a large equipment for towing, machines for wrecking, pumps, hawsers, and other devices for giving aid to vessels in distress. She has strong searchlights and a 500-mile bad weather wireless outfit. She will carry six officers and a crew of sixty and sail from Portland, range as far as Cape Ann. Her speed is only 12½ knots; beam 32 feet, capacity of 205 tons of coal to carry her, 4,000 miles. The Woodbury ran into the harbor of Havana during the Spanish war with a flag of truce made of a table cloth to arrange for an exchange of prisoners. She has won many honors in rescue work, and will probably be consigned to Portland for a naval training ship. The Tallapoosa, an oil burner, will also be launched here today and christened by Mabel Hartwell, of Mobile. The Tallapoosa will operate in the Gulf of Mexico.

HUGE SAWFISH SEEN AT CENTRAL BRIDGE SATURDAY

Saturday morning a colored woman reported to C. H. Pelletier and Capt. Luther Willin and their wives at the toll house on the Central bridge that a huge sawfish, apparently dead, was lying in the shoal water inshore between the bridge and the seawall of the Orange Island park subdivision. They were unable just then to go and see the fish and shortly thereafter it was noticed by Carl Sparks, who went to the toll house to borrow an axe and coil of rope, with the purpose of securing the saw from the fish. Mr. Sparks waded out to the big fish and met with a surprise when on taking hold of it it suddenly developed a rapid action with its weapon that caused him to beat a hasty retreat to a place of safety, while the sawfish made its way to deep water and escaped. The fish is said by those who saw it to have been between 12 and 15 feet in length, with a saw five or six feet long.
